

Information on South Main Clinic

South Main Clinic, located in the central part of the valley, provides care for the under-served of Salt Lake City. South Main Clinic is the program's largest continuity site. A substantial number of families seen at this clinic speak no English. Spanish is the most common other language spoken; most of the staff speak Spanish. Spanish translators assist staff and residents. Residents with continuity clinics at South Main have the opportunity to see well children, as well as children with acute illnesses, and to closely follow medically complex patients, many of whom live in socially challenging situations. The faculty in this clinic, in addition to being outstanding general pediatricians, has expertise in behavior and development, infectious disease, and public health. In 2005 the Clinic won the Ambulatory Pediatric Association's award for Health Care Delivery.
